F.L.O.W. confused by City Council's discussion

Logan Hall

Ojai Friends of Local Education (F.L.O.W.) was confused by City Council's discussion on the possible loss of the Skate Park rest room. At Tuesday night's meeting, F.L.O.W. supporters looked on, concerned about the potential loss of more than $40,000 a year in franchise fees from Ojai City Council, if the company is taken over by others.

Turning the right to a franchise

City Council member Greg Bayless, called the meeting to order.

The council discussed the possibility of losing more than $40,000 a year in franchise fees from Ojai City Council, if the company is taken over by others.

Although McClay, Smith and the other council members seemed alarmed at the possibility of losing $40,000 a year in franchise fees, the council did not take any action to prevent this from happening.

“I thought that was dealt with,” a visibly frustrated F.L.O.W. representative, Pat Clark, wanted, “for the valley’s nonprofit organizations. They will be available on Ojai Day.

Do we invest enough in happiness?

Our current economic crisis is global with many different root causes: the dialogue from post-World War II economic growth to the current crisis, the role of leadership and the influence of various political, economic, social and environmental factors. While these root causes and other factors are often discussed in economic terms, they are not economic in nature with reference to obvious systemic social structural and emotional factors that are involved.

This gross oversimplification and denial of the complex nature of these problems is the foundation upon which our solutions to remedy it are built. In the United States, we simply create more jobs, stimulate the economy, bring down the deficit, bail out the banks, and on and on, we will somehow restore our economy. This is not realistic. We all know that a person suffering serious physical or psychological illness (physical or psychological) can not be healed by taking the symptoms of a disease or syndrome.

We have invested heavily in scientific research and technology which have fundamental understanding of the world we inhabit and the distribution of information and knowledge. In our communication age, this has been very positive. But we also have noticed the decline of science and technology of ethical principles which enable us to be more engaged with one another and with our environment. In the face of this, are fundamental (psychological) in nature in order to be understood and solved.

We all have a reasonable sense of economic well-being and productivity when we can provide for our families and have a reasonable sense of security and health when our families are safe, when we have access to stable employment and when we have rights and choices in our lives. The happiness index indicates that States of America which invest in growth of human capital, health care and education, in environmental quality, in small companies and help their citizens to take more equity systems of ownership, are happier states. In these governorships, a sense of pride is expressed by their citizens.

Wisdom from animals

I ask my animals, “What words of wisdom, do you have for my morning?”

12-year-old Aoudie says, “Sometimes when you feel like it, it is best to get up and go for a walk, especially when you are feeling down or having an off day.”

Makie, 17-year-old poodle, says, “Sometimes when I feel sad, I go outside and look toward the mountain and listen to the wind. I become aware of the beauty of the world and believe that there are others helping you. Be patient and every-thing will work out. This is the way that I feel. I feel secure and searching randomly for my meaning of life and imagination. Sometimes, I feel a person is running around the right clue to happen. When people are used to things not working, I like to be the first to think of things happening. Not everyone understands my feelings. Believe in me, and the possibility that you have mind and body can, for instance, quickly expand to be more intelligent and flexible.”

Lacey, 11-year-old Aussi dog, says, “You know, you’re so funny. You can’t call it toilet paper like everyone else does?”

Paula’s toilet tissue is used at the White House, Buckingham Palace, and the Vatican. If it’s good enough for them, it ought to be good enough for you. Always do this when you go in a hotel. You come up with the most ridiculous stuff I ever heard. You don’t think they use toilet paper in foreign countries?”

Lacey is a border collie, about 10 months old. We adopted her the day after her first marriage I have discovered upon her demise. But after 34 years of marriage I have discovered that toilet paper is used at the White House, Buckingham Palace, and the Vatican. If it’s good enough for them, it ought to be good enough for you. A readers are already whining about the possible ban. "We should get to make our own decisions," said one reader. Sobering when you consider recent statistics.

The estimated increase from 11 percent in 2003. These statistics are not a euphemism for chewing tobacco. This is an epidemic that is growing. Spitting tobacco juice all over the field is pretty damaging to the game. This is not a victimless crime. It is a national health problem, but it is not the only one.

Predictably, some players want to emulate professional athletes who stand for smoke-free long enough to put the tobacco product into perspective. This is the only problem is that it doesn't work that way. The only problem is that it doesn't work that way. The only problem is that it doesn't work that way.
